'90S NOSTALGIA

The '90s Fashion Choices Justin Timberlake Would Probably Like Us to Forget

BY DARRICK THOMAS ON APRIL 18, 2013

Share 131

Nowadays, Justin Timberlake is doing his best to cement his reputation as a suit and tie kind of guy, and it's working for him. Just look how dashing:

But he wasn't always so dapper. Like many of us who grew up in the '90s, Justin fell victim to some terrible, ridiculous fashion choices — the difference being all his sartorial decisions were documented and saved for posterity thanks to the fan sites, teen magazines, and promotional materials dedicated to his NSYNC beginnings. While J.T. would probably like to erase those early days from his fashion memory, we're here to pay tribute.

(Thanks for the laughs, NSYNC stylist, wherever you are.)

One of the most unusual stage outfits ever worn by the group was the silk pajama-looking attire they wore during their first tour. Each guy had a different color tunic with matching crushed velvet trousers.

Cargo pants + turtleneck + black jean jacket + bandana = gold.

Justin's silly outfit aside, remind me how Lance Bass could wear this number and still convince the world he was straight.
